HardTimes.com

Introduction
In hard situations finding the right words can be a struggle. From sending an email to your boss a text to a friend about a breakup, what do you say, how do you respond? HardTimes.com is here for you, with specially curated responses grouped by category you no longer have to wonder what to say. This web application is designed to provide pre written human responses for these moments so people can communicate with thoughtfulness and empathy.

Vision
This web application is designed to make it easier to know what to say during the hard time when you just don't have the right words. Unlike other automated softwares that offer a similar service every response is written by a real person for a voice that doesn't sound curated by a computer.

Innovative aspects
- Human made responses that don't have that artificial touch, written by real human minds
- Curated categories to make it easy to find the right words for the right situation. With categories like grief, workplace issues, and apologies, you'll find responses for just about any situation.
- Plus an additional category with motivational quotes to keep you going during those tough moments

Features
- Each person can sign in and create an account or view as a guest
- Search and Filter
    - Users can search for and filter different prompts based on search needs
- Saving and sharing
    - Prompts can then be saved to a users profile for later use
    - Prompts can also be shared via email or text
